“Sadly we recently lost the great artiste Roy Hudd who I fondly remember performing with in the 1980’s. I am deeply concerned that the Streatham Hill Theatre, where he made his professional debut as a comedian in 1957 is at risk. After a long life as a theatre and bingo hall this magnificent building is sitting unused but not unloved.

Thankfully the Friends of Streatham Hill Theatre are campaigning to reawaken this Sleeping Beauty of a theatre as an arts and cultural centre to give potential future stars a chance to shine. As a long standing resident of Streatham Hill I wish the Friends success in their aims – they are currently crowdfunding so please do what you can to support them at save.streathamhilltheatre.org”
